Mmmmm.....

I am very impressed by Encarta.
My son uses it to do his homework, and he can answer all the questions without having to learn anything.

Verbatim quote, parent to David Johnson, formerly Librarian, Sevenoaks School, 1993.

What is plagiarism?

Plagiarism is the use of someone else's words or ideas without due attribution or acknowledgement, an attempt to pass off those words or ideas as one's own.

WHY cite?

- Give credit where it's due
- Provide evidence of research
- Strengthen your arguments
- Build on what is known
- In turn, the writer will want, expect, & deserve recognition

Why is plagiarism wrong?

- It is cheating, it is theft, it is fraud.
- “You didn’t learn the material. Your writing skills didn’t improve. Your grade is based on deception.” (Edlund)
- “Cheating takes away from everyone’s achievement. If you are working hard and doing your best, it’s not fair when somebody cheats” (Hess, quoted by Chidley, 1997).

Why they cheat

- Ignorance
- Need to pass, need to achieve
- Laziness, bad time management
- Lack of understanding, lack of interest
- Everyone else does it (and seems to get away with it)
- The teacher won’t know
- The teacher does not care
- Culture

The cheat sites and the paper mills

- Some are free and some for fee
- Many condemn plagiarism (?), many condone it
- Some display their essays, some fax or email
- Many link to other sites
- Some custom write essays
- Cost is no guarantee of quality

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Figuratively speaking (1)

- 1996: 28 pay-for sites on the internet (Hickman)
- 1998: 38 free essay sites / 72 pay-for sites (Hickman)
- 2000: 11000 sites (Sacchet)
- 2000: 400 quality sites (Senechal)

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Figuratively speaking (2)

- 1997: Schoolsucks.com claimed between 5000 and 6000 visits per day
- 1999: High Performance Papers : peak term-paper due time: 800 requests for custom written papers – 800 requests a day
- 80% to 87% U.S. students admit to cheating at least once (Kleiner & Lord; McCabe)
- 26% admit to plagiarising at least once (McCabe)

Stone Soup

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Good news, bad news

- The good news : most of the essays on the free essay sites are mediocre.
- The bad news : you may not realise that mediocre students are plagiarizing mediocre essays.
- The worst of it : second language students may not recognize poor language, poor composition.

Fortunately...

Students who cheat tend to think that their teachers are extremely stupid.

The tricks they get up to

- Copy a large section but reference/ quote just a small portion
- Build a pastiche from several sources
- Make up false citations/ references
 - Use an author available in the library
 - Invent an author/ source
 - Use a real web site
 - Reference a web site but not the web page
- Make up quotations/ misquote

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Some (more) of the giveaways

- Lack of citations; mix of references
- Lack of bibliography
- 'Interesting' references to page numbers
- Level of works cited
- Reference to items not included
- Failure to cite good evidence!
- Spelling (US/ UK etc)
- Non-sequiturs

Research
is not about finding out.

Research
is about finding evidence!

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Finding evidence...

- Bibliography = witnesses!
- References = evidence!

- Check the evidence, check what the witnesses have to say!
 - Check what has been cited.
 - Check what has not been cited.
 - Check what should have been cited.

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Using evidence...

- Double-check the evidence!
- Cross-examine the witnesses!!

- No evidence = no case
 - = no research = no grade (?)

The detective work

- Ask to see books, printouts, p/copies etc
- Check the sources cited
- Internet search for essay title, quotations, keywords
- Check school (and local?) libraries
- Check online resources available to students
- Check the cheat sites
- Use a search site/ use a search service

Eureka!

It need not all be lifted
– it's enough that some
(a significant proportion?)
is discovered to be stolen property...

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

The tip of the iceberg

- The searchable web
- The rest of the web (the invisible web)
- The rest of the internet
- All other sources of information
- If it's not there, even the most powerful search engine won't find it...

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

You won't catch them all

- The invisible web
- The invisible network
- Translations
- Obscure publications
- Unpublished materials
- The thrill of the chase

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

When all is revealed!

- Give (the ignorant) a chance to make amends (?)
- Be SURE of your facts.
- Follow policy.

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

Deterrent measures

- SHOW YOU ARE SERIOUS!
- School ethos, policy
- Explanation & instruction
- Restrict sources / demand hard-copies
- Systematic, random checks
- Make work interesting, make work personal, use Essential Questions
- Make work fresh, don't rehash
- Habit – citation from the start
- Live feedback/ the process skills

Plagiarism : beating the cheats – John Royce : Robert College

The research evidence

It works!

- Pursuing an active anti-plagiarism policy reduces plagiarism.
- Use of cheat-resistant assignments and alternative assessment reduces plagiarism.
